These abstracts of Somerset County Maryland Certificates of Freedom are taken from the Maryland State Archives reel of microfilm that includes collections CR47,251-5; CR47,251-6; CR 47,251-7 and CR47,251-8. The microfilm, available for viewing at the Nabb Center, also includes certificates from St. Mary's County, but they are not included in this abstract. These records represent certificates which were issued by the Clerk of the Court of Somerset County from 1821 – 1864. Some of the records show the certificate as it was recorded by the Clerk, others show the actual letter or affidavits which were presented to the Clerk as proof of freedom.

While the certificates follow a general format, some offer more information than others. Information which may be obtained in the certificates includes the name of the certificate holder, although a surname is not always included; where born and raised, physical characteristics including height, complexion and scars and adjudged age. While features included in this abstract include smallpox scars and vaccinations, there are often other features in the original such as scars from a burn or other accident. It is recommended that the microfilmed originals be viewed in order to read the complete description of persons of interest.

Other important information found in these certificates may be about the mother, former owner and how the person became free – whether born of free woman, manumitted by owner, or determined to be free through a court hearing. Where available, witnesses or signers of affidavits are also included as they may be helpful in identifying the geographic location of the certificate holders.

Certificates of freedom for years dating from the early 1800's until the Civil War exist for many of Maryland's counties, including Caroline, Dorchester, Kent, Queen Anne's and Talbot on the Eastern Shore. The complete list is available on the Maryland State Archives' website. As stated on their website, the General Assembly passed a law in 1805 to identify free African Americans and to control the availability of freedom papers. The law required African Americans who were born free to record proof of their freedom in the county court and the court would issue them a certificate of freedom. In the case of a manumitted person, the court clerk or register of wills would verify the manumitting document before issuing the certificate. This law (Chapter 66, Laws of 1805) was created because "great mischiefs have arisen from slaves coming into possessions of certificates of free Negroes, by running away and passing as free under the faith of such certificates."

While this list is sorted in alphabetical order, the certificates are recorded roughly in chronological order. Abbreviations have been used in the table. Under the column "freedom" the abbreviation DoM refers to Deed of Manumission; while BFW means born of free woman. If the mother was white or was further identified, this information is included in "other". While there were a few additional "complexions" noted beyond those included here, most shown are as originally written. Unless otherwise noted, persons in this listing were native to Somerset County.

The database of these abstracts is available on CD at the front desk of the Nabb Center for anyone who would like to view and sort the data to obtain additional insight into the records.
